And a Lot of the Students from Harvard Went Back to Brazil To Do Field Work over the Summer in Rhodes
Thesis Papers Dissertations on Topics Related to Brazil and We Had New Collaboration Projects That Started Exactly because of this Exposure That's Point One Point Two Is this Was Mentioned Yesterday It's It's All about How You Establish Partnerships and What I Would Say Here Is that There Are Partnerships and Their Partnerships and in Public Health a Partnership Really Has To Be a Real Collaboration a Two-Way Collaboration That Has Deep Connected to It the Issue of Building Capacity so those Partnerships Really Should Be Building a Bridge between the Brazilian University the American University and through this Bridge You Have Exchange of Knowledge You Have Exchange of Experiences

And It's Also a Way To Build Capacity Okay That's Point to the Third Point Is the Issue of Translation I CanNot Imagine Doing any Work in Public Health if You Can't Think of How To Translate the Results of Your Work into some Action on the Ground There's GotTa Be a Policy Implication There's GotTa Be Something Coming out of Your Work That Can Improve the Lives of the People on the Ground All the Communities Are Working with if You Can't Figure Out Anything You'Re Not Doing Public Health I Don't Know What You'Re Doing but You'Re Not Doing Public Health Depth Translation Is Absolutely Crucial in to that Extent
